Item Description FIELD

Site Data

This feature is a field of improved grassland with a generous cover of clover used as pasture. The land rises from the south as far as the centre of the field then drops away to the northern boundary. There is evidence of ploughing with a pitch of 2m. There is what may be a building platform in the southwest corner and on the oblique AP there is a cropmark measuring 50m in length by 33m located centrally along the northern boundary.

History Summary

In mid 19th century the field was divided into 2 fields with a NS boundary and remained unchanged until the mid 20th century when the fields were merged to create the present field
