Site Data

This has been recently used for cereals and at the time of inspection the stubble was still visible amongst recent grass growth. It is largely flat with a slight rise towards the north eastern boundary. The north western boundary is formed by a hedge, the north eastern by the edge of a wood, the south eastern as described above and the south western by a hedge and post and wire fence following the line of the Ripley Road. Running parallel with the south eastern boundary and just inside it is a low profile bank which may be a plough headland or a trackway. About 100m from the south eastern end is a stone scatter amidst a bed of nettles which suggests a possible structure now demolished. The remains of the old barn (feature 182) at GR 433841 458273 are visible in the vegetation on the edge of the adjacent wood on the north east boundary. Traces of brick work and scattered stone lie amongst the grass and nettle growth.

History Summary

The field has basically remained unchanged from the middle 19th century until the present day, early 20th century. The minor changes were the addition of enclosures in the SW corner of the field. A number of maps show this field
