Item Description QUARRY

Site Data

This is situated at the north west corner of the wood on Coney Garth, amongst the trees and partly up the slope. Accessed with difficulty it consists of oolitic magnesium limestone, yellowish in colour and friable. The exposed face stands about three metres high and is weathered. Below the limestone there is an exposed area of quartz sandstone the juxtaposition of which reveals the unconformity that is also visible in Knaresborough. (sample AAD) The sandstone is fine and free of pebbles. The dissolving limestone leaching into the gritstone soil would have improved it for agriculture.

History Summary

The quarry is only shown on maps of the 21st century.
