Site Data

This feature is a culverted termination in the form of a stone structure of drainage ditch 144, projecting outward to the northwest from the boundary wall of Appleby Carr. It has been erected above the termination of the field drain which flows into the Carr from the north west. It projects 1.0 metre from the wall, is 7.0 metres in length and stands 2.2 metres high. It is composed of reddened sand stone blocks with magnesian limestone quoins. On the outer side at ground level in the centre is a stone lintel measuring 1.0 metre long and 15cm thick. It spans the intake from the culverted drain. Just above the lintel in the centre is a small square socket which was probably associated with some control mechanism.
